RICE- Excepting the 3 large Mills and 4 smaller mills who give their own customers at very irregular times and in small quantities, practically there are only 2 other traders, Banumiah of Santepet and Siddiah of Ittigegud, who supply the whole demand of the City, vending 4 annas to a rupee worth at a time, at very high prices, 4½ to 5 seers the rupee, 2nd class rice. There is a heavy rush at their shops at all hours of the day-

Some of the petty dealers occasionally buy small quantities from Siddiah, and also get their small quantities of paddy milled in some of the mills at such intervals as the mills choose, and sell at similar prices prices off and on.

Both the mills and the traders combine in cornering, and secretly transport -ing to other places at fabulous prices, during nights and on other unobserved occasions, with the result, that though there is plenty, rice does not come to Market, except in very small quantities, not continuously even, but irregularly and at very high prices.

To break such combination, now and then I lend from Municipal Stores, to such of the comparatively well behaved retail dealers, some rice, against the security of their paddy which keep lying in the mills. To the extent such rice can be served to the public, it mitigates the hardship, and in= as much as these dealers have to return in kind, rice or paddy, they sell also at the ~~preventing~~ prevailing market rates and there is no trouble in such procedure except that the Municipal resources for the time being are very limited.

But for want of stock and on account of very high prices, we are obliged to issue, not to the market generally or even to any of the traders, but through the 5) Municipal mohalla Depots kept up for selling ragi, some small quantities of Burmah rice, either ~~the~~ to supplement ragi when it gets scarce or in lieu of it when there is no ragi to give= On such occasions, all the other rice dealers either raise their prices still higher or manage to close their shops or expose for sale very little and so drive all people to such Municipal ragi depots, thereby deple-ting the same and causing greater scarcity and hardship-

Wherever pursuation has failed, show of exercise of commandeering powers has had to be made since 26th February 1919, since when the situation has slightly eased, and all have been promissing to keep the markets fairly supplied.

The result is being keenly watched.

RAGI- Hunsur ragi has yet to arrive. Only 3 or 4 carts come at a time . 373 pallas of ragi was all that was available for the week or about 53 pallas for a day on an average , and there was absolutely no ragi for 2 days.

No ragi is coming to market yet.

Is very anxious.
